Outrider Ambassador Playbook

Oct 29, 2026 · @Carter

Welcome

You were picked out of more than 90 applicants. We took one person per chapter and class at each school, so the people at your school who hear about Outrider will hear about it from you.

Outrider runs small trips for college students to places that were scouted in person first. Great hotels. Real itineraries. Staff on the ground. Not the cheap option. A trip worth bragging about.

Your job is simple: bring your people. Every friend who books takes $100 off your trip, and five makes it free.

Everything you need is in this playbook. Read it once, then keep it open while you text.

Why Outrider

Outrider is not the typical college trip. It's smaller, nicer and planned with real care, and that's what you're selling.

From Carter

> I was social chair and then president of ATO at Auburn. I booked our formals, moved 200 people across state lines and chased every deposit. I saw how college trips get run: the cheapest hotel, the biggest party, and hope nothing goes wrong. That formula hasn't changed in twenty years.
>
> Most of us grew up traveling with our families and staying somewhere nice. A trip can be about more than one big party. It can be about going somewhere special, staying somewhere good, and doing it with your best friends. So I started Outrider to be the other version.
>
> That's why it costs a little more. In Telluride you stay at The Peaks Resort & Spa in Mountain Village. Lift tickets, rentals, transfers and group dinners are handled, and our staff is there the whole time. It's not the cheap option. It's a high-end hotel that's actually worth it, and a trip worth bragging about.

How to say it to friends

> It's not the typical college trip. It's a small group at a really nice hotel, and everything's handled. That's why it's a little more, and it's worth it.

Tell Carter's story when someone asks who's behind it. People trust a trip more when they know someone like them built it.

How it works

$100 off your trip for every friend who books. Get five and it's free.

Your spot	Held for you now. No deposit.
What counts	A friend who books either Telluride trip with your code and is paid in full by November 14. Chptr member bookings count.
Your code	Friends enter it at checkout at outrider.travel. It gives them no discount; it tells us they came from you.
Hit five	Each friend takes $100 off your trip. At five, your trip is free. Pick December or January.
Short of five	Pay for your spot by November 14, minus $100 per friend, or release it. Your call, no hard feelings.
Deadline	Signups close November 14, 2026.

Friends on a payment plan count once their plan is paid off. December payment plans finish on November 14.

Spring break is next: Punta Cana, staying at Zemi Miches, a brand-new resort in a quieter part of the coast, timed to each school's spring break. Ambassadors hear the terms first.

Your first 72 hours

The ambassadors who hit five start fast. Do these in order and tell Carter when you finish.

- [ ] Reply to your welcome text with "I'm in"
- [ ] Follow @outridertravel and turn on post notifications
- [ ] Write down ten people who would actually go. Names, not groups.
- [ ] Text those ten one by one, using the scripts below

- [ ] Post an Instagram story today: share one of our @outridertravel posts or a graphic from your dashboard, add your code, and tag @outridertravel. We repost ambassadors.
- [ ] Drop the group message in one chat you're in
- [ ] Get one friend to book or put down a deposit

Two things move people: hearing it from someone they trust, and knowing who else is going. Lead with both.

Scripts to copy

Swap in the brackets and make them sound like you. A personal text beats a post every time.

One-on-one text (send this first)

> Hey [name]. I'm an ambassador for Outrider this year, a new college ski trip company. They're doing Telluride Dec 14–18 and Jan 4–8. Nice hotel, lift tickets, rentals, airport shuttle and the group events are all in it, $1,400 for December. I'm putting a group together and you're the first person I thought of. Want in?

When they say "tell me more"

> It's small, about 100 people in December and 50 in January, not a 1,000-person party trip. We stay at The Peaks in Mountain Village. Flights are the only big extra; you fly into Montrose and they pick you up. You can hold a spot with a deposit and do a payment plan or Klarna. Book at outrider.travel with my code [CODE], and I'll send you our group code so we room together.

Group chat

> Putting together a Telluride group for December or January through Outrider. Lodging, lift tickets, rentals and transfers are all included. Who's in? outrider.travel, code [CODE]

Story caption

> Telluride, December 14–18. Small group, good hotel, everything handled. DM me for the details. Code [CODE] at outrider.travel

Follow-up, two or three days later

> Still thinking about Telluride? [Name] and [name] are in. Signups close November 14 and rooms are going.

Final nudge, around November 10

> Last call on Telluride. Signups close Saturday the 14th. Want me to save you a spot in our room?

FAQ

The questions friends will ask, with answers you can paste.

Is it worth $1,400? Lodging at The Peaks, three days of lift tickets, rentals, airport transfers and the group events are all in it. Price it out on your own and the gap shows fast.

Can I pay over time? Yes. A deposit holds your spot, then a payment plan or Klarna.

What isn't included? Flights and travel insurance.

How do I get there? Fly into Montrose (MTJ). Outrider's shuttle picks you up and brings you back. Land on the first day, fly home on the last.

Who else is going? College students from schools across the South and Texas, about 100 in December and 50 in January. Name the friends who have already booked.

Can I room with my friends? Yes. Share your group code when you book and you'll be placed together. Rooms are same-gender.

Is this a party trip? No. It's a small group at a good hotel with real plans every day. It's a lot of fun, built for a group of friends rather than a thousand strangers.

I'm in Chptr. Is there a discount? Yes. Chptr members get $150 off with code CHPTR. Put CHPTR in the discount code box and my code in the ambassador code box, and your booking still counts for me.

Is Outrider legit? It's run by Carter Busby, a former ATO chapter president at Auburn who has planned group trips for years. It's the official travel partner of Chptr. Questions go to bookings@outrider.travel and get an answer within a day.

What if I have to cancel? Point them to the terms at outrider.travel or to Carter. Don't promise refunds.

Brand rules

You're the face of Outrider at your school. Keep it accurate and keep it classy.

Do

- Talk about what's real: the hotel, what's included, the dates, who's going
- Use the graphics on your dashboard as they are
- Tag @outridertravel when you post
- Send anything you can't answer to Carter or bookings@outrider.travel

Don't

- Name or knock other trip companies. Talk about Outrider, not them.
- Promise discounts, refunds, room assignments or anything not in this playbook
- Pressure anyone. One follow-up, then let it go.
- Edit the logo or make your own graphics with it
- Post content from the trip that you wouldn't want a parent or employer to see

Outrider's own voice is plain and specific. If you write anything longer than a text, lead with facts, not hype.

Agreement

Replying "I'm in" to your welcome text means you agree to the following for the Telluride trips.

1. You represent Outrider honestly and follow the brand rules above.
2. Each friend who books with your code and is paid in full by November 14, 2026 takes $100 off your trip. Five friends makes your trip free.
3. Outrider holds your spot without a deposit until November 14. If you're short of five, you pay for your spot by then, minus your $100 credits, or release it.
4. A free trip covers the trip package. Flights, travel insurance and personal spending are yours.
5. You're an independent ambassador, not an employee, and can step away anytime by telling Carter.

6. Outrider can update these terms for future trips. Spring break terms come separately.
7. Your code and these terms stay with you.
